Pass IT on today – help someone start enjoying the internet.

Pass IT ON...

TalkTalk is proud to be an official partner of Race Online 2012, a landmark national campaign aiming to get the UK as near to 100% internet enabled by the London Olympics. We are working together to inspire and encourage people to get online for the first time.

If you use the internet, you know how great it is. You can buy stuff, stay in touch with friends, get the latest weather forecast and watch that episode of Corrie you missed. How would you cope without it?

But 10 million people have to cope without the internet every day. That's how many people in the UK have never been online. It's likely that one of these people is a friend, family member, or neighbour of yours.

The internet could transform their lives – switching energy providers to save cash; banking online instead of struggling to the Post Office. And who isn't over the moon with an email from an old friend or far-off relative?

Pass IT on is about you helping someone you know to start enjoying the internet. At www.helppassiton.co.uk you'll find hints and tips plus five free courses covering the basics they'll need to get online. Pass IT on now at www.helppassiton.co.uk

Pass IT on – the internet is for everyone.
